Check the airlines - it might be worth paying a few dollars more to be on a leading international carrier with better food, service and entertainment.? Check the routing and stopover times, as cheap fares often have middle-of-the-night departures, make more than one stop or have lengthy stops that push out the total travelling time. Some travellers are willing to spend eight hours in an obscure airport in order to get a super-cheap flight but many others are not.? Check that the flights you are comparing are going to the same airport, as many cities have multiple airports and what you save on the airfare you could spend on a transfer into the city.? Make sure all the quoted fares include taxes, as some retailers still quote fares excluding taxes and surcharges.
