Probably more than any other popular musician of the late-20th19:160sec, Bob Marley was perceived by his fans as a prophet. e:160ed is songs like “~.” that helped him gain such a reputation. . No, this does not mean that the texts predict the future. Piuttosto 160; Rather, it is Jah Bob’s ability to analyze the times, from the perspective of his oppressed people in combination with his understanding of “the book” . e. the Bible), which gives the texts such a feeling. ta This is in addition to the fact that a part of the formulation was derived from 160; the teachings of Marcus Garvey ta (1887-1940). It is worth noting that Garvey himself is seen by many as the greatest black prophet of the first 20th19:160sec. Meaning of the lyrics of “ di” The texts actually begin in the past, with Bob referring to the transatlantic Slavic trade. ‘ 160; For readers who are aware of this moment of history, it marks an era in which millions of Africans were exported outside the motherland, mainly to serve as slaves in the western hemisphere. . 160; it was really a tough test both in transit and destination, where the narrator and those like him should not have survived and flourish. ‘ 160; Yet, through divine intervention, he and his people are still able to move a’; triumphally aa. Meanwhile, in the next chorus, Bob Marley compares “~--~--”; “ songs of freedom”; . 160; And all things considered, the latter reads as a reference to the old-time nigger spirits which, in their own way, helped bring blacks through slavery, infatti in fact the singer states that these melodies are “all he had before.” And this further alludes to the notion that they, like his belief in “Almighty”, are an act of faith. Or said otherwise he and his people were put in ain which they had nothing to support in terms of optimism for the future. The only thing they had was their faith, which was often expressedsong. Chapter Two At the beginning of the second verse is where Bob Marley channels the aforementioned Marcus Garvey with the famous line. boz Marcus Garvey was a prime-20thhÄE 160; sec. Black leader and 160; holds the distinction, until a century later, of leader is the largest mass movement in istory226. pS160; He is also recognized as the194; 160; founder of Rastafarianism, the religion that Bob Marley adhered to, although he didn226;Ot the dread sport hangs. Pøe Go the above quotes194; 160; centered on Garvey basically putting the burden on his people until they free their minds as they had already been, rather-just, freed from the physical slavery of slavery. p~ So Marley is putting forward a similar idea, that it is up to them to decide until they emancipate the theselvessa6;00 from being held back by a harmful way of thinking, which may further be said to have been picked up during the days of slavery. He then goes on to address what was actually a hot topic in popular music during the early 1980s,1994;160the prospect of nuclear war. pS160; He knows that most people are completely powerless in the face of such. pS160; But he keeps telling them they don’t fear-. He is confident because of a prophetic idea that basically reads as “what will be”226; “what will be.” 160; In other words, yes, world leaders can own the means to build destructive weapons of the world. But in the end they are only playing their part in the great divine plan of things. Chapter III, then, emanates what it should have been: 194;160probably a reference is to Martin Luther King (1 919 199-1968), Malcolm X (1925-1965) and other black leaders killed-AA and perhaps also to Jesus himself-A;A;A in terms of martyrs. pS160; But more to the point Bob, expresses anguish is 128; you can also say disgust is at the idea that, after their killings, people who have just What? D 160? concludes the verse by indicating, once again, to divine pattern of things. pS160; And in this regard he is no longer judging people to be passive. pS160; Rather he more or less concludes that the death of such individuals, as well as the (lack of) reaction of the people, is also the fulfillment of prophecy, so to speak. Conclusion In conclusion, it is 160; ÓAz-AA is of a very prophetic nature. As will be elaborated in this post the final section, Marley put it together at a time when her death was imminent. This could be why it devotes a good part of it to looking not only into the future, but also into the past, even if it does so macrocosmopolically. 160; and furthermore, it should be noted that facing death does not diminish his concern and hope for his people. He hopes that one day they will achieve true physical and mental freedom. And melodies like this serve as an expression of that desire, which is why he is encouraging others to sing together. All in all, Bob Marley, who acts more or less like a prophet, is still hoping for the complete ÄcÖÄ of his oppressed people.
