I have forgotten the pin on my phone and can't recall it. Is there any solution to bypass Android lock screen with emergency call?" - a question from Quora A lot of smart Android users ask us about emergency dialer Android bypasses these days. Believe it or not - you can in fact unlock an Android phone using emergency call. By exploiting your phone's security loophole, you can unlock your phone and later change it. While the solution might not work for every device, there is no harm in trying. Read on and learn how to unlock Android phone using emergency call. Part 1. How to Bypass Android Lock Screen Using Emergency Call? In some Android devices, we are able to bypass lock screen using emergency call. As you know, we can make an emergency call even when a device is locked. Therefore, the technique exploits this and tries to unlock the device. Ideally, it is a security loophole that was later fixed in Android 5. The chances are that the solution would only work if your device is running on Android 4.4 or an earlier version. To learn how to unlock the phone using emergency call, follow these steps: Turn on your device and tap on the "Emergency Call" button on the lock screen. This will open the dialer screen to make an emergency call. Enter a string of special symbols. For instance, you can simply type asterisks (*) a few consecutive times. Double-tap it to highlight the string and copy it. Tap on the screen again and paste the copied string. Repeat the process a few more times (ideally 10 or 11) until you cannot highlight the string. Now, go back to the lock screen. Tap on the camera icon (or swipe left) to launch the Camera app. At the same time, pull the notification bar from the top. Go to your device settings by tapping on the gear icon at the top of the screen. As your phone would give the password prompt, long press and paste the copied string. You can paste the string multiple times to make sure that the option is no longer provided. Keep pasting the string until the interface would be crashed. The lock screen will disappear and be extended to the Camera's interface instead. In some time, the camera app will subsequently crash as well and the device would be unlocked. In the end, the home screen of the device would be displayed so that you can easily access your phone. By following this stepwise drill, you can learn how to unlock Android using emergency call. [Note] Bypassing lock screen on Android phone using emergency call might work on smartphones running on Android 5.0.
