Bleeding and temporary bombs may not work against his heavy mechanical armor. On the other hand, madness can be easily activated (depending on the power of the spell). Those who are not as impetuous as me are recommended. This is a great spell for those who like to play defense. With each successful blow, you will be reinstated in favor (titanium also does the same). It is a fact that ranged weapons cannot be used against a Titan. If you are a defensive player, I suggest you take position and use a tempo or life ball to increase your chances of winning. Defensive players have the best chance of winning. As for the offensive players, they should keep hurting the Titans if they win. You don't want to let him breathe, but you also don't want to get too close to him, unlike his head. Also, keep a safe distance from him or he will bring you to him with his hydraulic mechanical arm or he will throw a terrifying blue ball and whip you like you are nothing to him. Don't let it get you down or I will lose your health and his health will come back too. I believe the most powerful weapon you have, which is magic, must be used wisely, but before you can use it wisely, you must choose your magic. The most prominent spells in the game would be fury, monk's amulet, lightning bolt or spray of fire, ball of time, or incantation or mad bleed.

Oh, I totally forgot to mention the most important point of the game. Rage of the Storm can only be obtained by collecting all Monks. Remember that the titan is a slow but very intelligent monster. Be careful.

It shouldn't be confused. I ran into Titan a few times and even won after losing 200 times. FAQ What is the best weapon for Shadow Fight 2?
