ALL POSTSClassroom of the Elite. Season 3, episode 11.What a great episode! This has undoubtedly been the best one we have had to date: We are delving into the past of Ayanokoji, Sakayanagi and the White Room, the confrontations, especially that of Ayanokoji/Horikita against Sakayanagi/Hashimoto, all the suspense of Ayanokoji's past and their relationship because they allow themselves to be defeated, and finally, in my personal opinion, the little trust that Sakayanagi's "peace" generates in me."No replies yet. In the eleventh episode of 'Classroom of the Elite' season 2 titled 'A Man Who Cannot Command Himself Will Always Be a Slave,' Ryuen and his men visit Class D looking for the mastermind and follow Kouenji as soon as he leaves the room. When they confront him, Kouenji claims that they have got the wrong man as he has no interest in petty rivalries between the different classes and is therefore not the mastermind. In his desperation, Ryuen corners Karuzawa and tortures her to figure out the true identity of the man running Class D. Ryuen Visits Class D The day after Ayanokoji tells Karuzawa that he is going to cut all ties with her, she waits for him at the school. When Karuzawa greets him, Ayanokoji treats her like any other acquaintance and does not show any emotion. Later that day, Ryuen visits Class D with his men and appears to be looking for someone. As soon as he sees Kouenji walking out of the class, he and his men begin to follow him- sparking a commotion among Class D students. It is obvious from Ryuen's demeanor that he has planned something evil. Therefore, Horikita, Ayanokoji, and others immediately spring into action. When they finally find Ryuen, Kouenji, and others, they can feel the tension in the atmosphere. To make matters worse, Sakayanagi also arrives there at the wrong time and appears to be interested in escalating the situation even further. Ryuen is straightforward and asks Kouenji if he is the mastermind behind Class D, who has been sabotaging his plans recently. Kouenji literally scoffs at the idea and argues that he is not at all interested in the politics of different classes. Despite Ryuen trying to come up with the best arguments he can, Kouenji decides to show remarkable restraint and control of his emotions. When Ryuen finally threatens to get him attacked by his men, Kouenji warns him that he would knock anyone that tries to come close to him. The confrontation eventually ends in a stalemate, with Ryuen still completely clueless about the mastermind's real identity. Therefore, he continues to take the matter into his own hands and adopts extreme measures to figure out the truth. Does Karuzawa Reveal Mastermind's Identity? How Far is Ryuen Willing to Go to Open Her Mouth? After the confrontation with Kouenji does not yield the desired result, Ryuen in his desperation decides to go after Karuzawa- the only person who knows the true identity of the mastermind without a shadow of a doubt. He sends her a few emails to call her to an isolated location on the campus. Although there are cameras everywhere in the school, Ryuen and his men manage to deactivate them by accessing the control room. So, when Karuzawa finally meets them she is standing at the blind spot where the school administration can't really reach her for help. Karuzawa does not waste any time and asks Ryuen why he had called her there. She also wonders what led him to ask her about Manabe, since she had been bullying her until Ayanokoji managed to stop her. Ryuen is straight to the point and asks Karuzawa if she knows the true identity of class D's mastermind. Although Karuzawa is shaken up inside, she tries to act strong and argues that she does not him. Unfortunately, Ryuen has done his homework and tells Karuzawa that he has talked to Manabe. Manabe had told him that they had been bullying her until the mastermind intervened and saved Karuzawa from them. Her statement proves that Karuzawa must have come in direct contact with the mastermind at some point, so she is obviously lying right now. When it seems that she is unlikely to open her mouth without coercion, Ryuen and his men start bullying her knowing that she has been bullied for years. However, they do not stop there, they then resort to even more desperate means to get the information they need. Karuzawa has to endure waterboarding, a terrible form of torture, over and over again. Ryuen continues to try and break her down mentally but Karuzawa appears determined. So, when she continues to argue that there is no mastermind even after enduring waterboarding, Ryuen decides that he has had enough. He grabs her by her hair and the episode ends there. It appears that Karuzawa will be subjected to a worse kind of torture now since even waterboarding has failed to open her mouth. Ryuen is determined and if no one rescues her, Karuzawa will probably get mentally scared for life. Reader's discretion is advised Classroom of the Elite season 3 episode 11: Kiyotaka and Sakayanagi clash in a battle of wits Sakayanagi and Kiyotaka during the Event Selection Exam, as seen in Classroom of the Elite season 3 episode 11 (Image via Lerche) After Kiyotaka and Sakayanagi had chosen their picks, the Events Selection Exam kicked off with basketball as the first event. For some reason, Kiyotaka wanted Sudo to stand down and let the other skilled players from Class 1-C give their best against Class 1-A, and they surprisingly managed to keep up with their opponents. Eventually, Kiyotaka switched Honda with Sudo to turn the tide of the battle in their favor. As Sudo was acclaimed for his athletic prowess, Sakayanagi had someone under her arsenal, who turned out to be Hayato Kitou, who had been holding back since the game began. Still, Sudo and his team managed to beat their opponents with ease. One of the reasons behind the victory for Class 1-C was Sudo's extensive focus on teamwork, a significant change in his attitude that was even surprising for Sakayanagi. Class 1-C secured victory in basketball, typing, and archery, whereas Class 1-A triumphed in Math and English. During the mental arithmetic test, Kiyotaka discovered that Sakayanagi had already threatened Katsuragi that if he betrayed her, she would get a bright student from her class expelled as a consequence. Six rounds were over, and the scores of both classes equaled, resulting in a tie, with just one final event left to decide their fate. However, as Sakayanagi was getting restless, she eventually stepped in, suggesting the next move to Hashimoto. Eventually, Kiyotaka entered the battlefield, and suddenly, the pace of the game elevated to the next level. During the game's final moments, Kiyotaka noticed something odd and eventually gave up, resulting in Class 1-C losing the round and the exam. While discussing the exam in the hallway, Sakayanagi and Kiyotaka encountered Tsukishiro, who revealed that he interfered with the exam by changing the last-minute instruction to Suzune. Since Kiyota didn't want anyone to learn about his personal battle and the deal with the White Room, he accepted whatever came for him and eventually lost the exam. The two had a one-on-one chess battle after school, picking up from the same place as before, and this time, Sakayanagi lost. Sakayanagi accepted the fact that Kiyotaka was really a genius and unveiled that she always wanted to learn more about him and to compete with him. In the end, she wanted him to learn about the warmth of the human touch, which, as a test subject of White Room, he never understood. Classroom of the Elite season 3 episode 11: Arisu's promise to her father Young Sakayanagi, as seen in Classroom of the Elite season 3 episode 11 (Image via Lerche) A flashback of Sakayanagi showcased her arrival at the White Room alongside her father, where she saw Kiyotaka for the first time ever. Sakayanagi's father hated the White Room program and wanted the institute to dissolve. Arisu promised her father that she would do everything in her power to ensure she wouldn't let any White Room subject surpass the real genius who could surpass even the lab-developed fake prodigies. Final thoughts on Classroom of the Elite season 3 episode 11 Classroom of the Elite season 3 episode 11 concluded with a bittersweet ending where the two geniuses finally shook hands to let bygones be bygones, and Class 1-C lost to Class 1-A, which was not what fans had been looking forward to. Nevertheless, the episode surprised fans with an amazing battle, and it is unfortunate that Sakayanagi and Kiyotaka's rivalry has reached its conclusion. About the author Quick Links Edited by Praveen Kumar The following contains spoilers for Episode 11 of Classroom Of The Elite Season 2, "A man who cannot command himself will always be a slave," now streaming on Crunchyroll. Classroom of the Elite's 11th episode showed how the Tokyo Metropolitan Advanced Nurturing High School students walk the thin line between what's socially unacceptable and what is considered ethical. It also revealed the thought patterns of some of the series cast. Characters like Kouenji & Sakayanagi received the spotlight in the episode, spicing up the show even further. Surprisingly, although episode 10 featured Ayanokoji dropping out from aiding class 1-D to reach Class A, episode 11 focused on other characters, sidelining the effect of Ayanokoji's latest decision, especially its impact on the storyline. Summarily, episode 11 is unarguably one of the darkest ones in the anime so far, and for good reasons. Ryuen & Kouenji's Clash Still antsy about being unable to smoke out Class D's mastermind, Ryuen resorted to direct confrontation. Entering Class D to spook its members and cause panic, Ryuen's prime target was, surprisingly, Kouenji, the self-absolved character of Class D. Sending his lackeys to stop his movements, Ryuen confronted Kouenji directly regarding the identity of Class D's mastermind. Not falling for any of Ryuen's provocations, Kouenji could clear every allegation regarding Ryuen's claim that he was Class D's hidden leader. The short encounter between these two characters showed the level of Kouenji's reasoning skills. Even before Ryuen revealed his intentions for stopping him, Kouenji deduced it instantly and revealed it to Ryuen. Even when threatened by Ryuen, Kouenji wasn't in the least bit afraid, showing his willingness to fight off Ryuen and his attackers if they approached him. This development shows the unhinged nature of most Classroom of the Elite characters. On the other hand, the encounter also revealed the likes of Arisu Sakanayagi, Class A's representative. Although nothing much was revealed about her in the episode, it revealed her nature, a manipulative one that enjoys teasing people. Episode 11 revealed her manipulative nature after Ryuen tried to strike her for calling him "Dragon Boy." One of Sakanayagi's followers blocked his kick like an emotionless human shield. This disturbing scene shows just the level of control Sakanayagi has over her classmates. Ruffled by the quick turn out of events, Horikita tried to act as an umpire, trying to resolve the issue; however, to her surprise, the disputing characters acted as if nothing had happened. Although this might seem like a good thing, it just showed how accustomed these characters are to violence. After the Ryuen-Kouenji clash, the episode focused on Ryuen and his plan to draw out Class D's mastermind, who was responsible for throwing a wrench into his plans. According to Ryuen, over the past two weeks, he stationed members of his class to spy on Class D members, occasionally putting pressure on the class's true mastermind. Apparently, his plan proved unfruitful. Regardless, he had one solid lead left to reveal the secret mastermind. Shockingly, that lead turned out to be a character accustomed to bullying, Karuzawa Kei. Ryuen planned to use Karuzawa Kei to draw out Ayanokoji. Choosing one of the secluded spots on the Academy grounds, Ryuen covered the cameras and created a cold room to use for his plans. Soon, Karuzawa shows up, questioning Ryuen for his reasons for summoning her to the secluded location. Then, Ryuen revealed that he was aware of her connection with Class D's mastermind. Going back to the season's early episodes, fans will recall Manabe's attempt to humiliate Karuzawa. However, Karuzawa was saved by Ayanokoji, who used a blackmail strategy on Manabe. Now, with the hunt for Class D's mastermind, Manabe revealed her encounter with the mysterious character to Ryuen, leading him to use Karuzawa as bait for Ayanokoji. The interrogation between Ryuen & Karuzawa started in a straightforward manner; however, Karuzawa denied knowing the identity of Class D's mastermind. Eventually, Ryuen revealed that he knew what really happened in the saga involving Manabe. This revelation fazed Karuzawa a bit, and although her actions suggested otherwise, she still insisted on not knowing the mastermind's identity. This led Ryuen to implement the bullying strategy, an effective plan against someone like Karuzawa, who is a victim of bullying in the past. However, surprisingly, even after Ryuen bullied and threatened Karuzawa to reveal Ayanokoji's identity, she refused. Karuzawa's unwillingness to reveal the mastermind's identity is certainly worthy of praise. However, her actions were quite surprising, considering the fact that Ayanokoji went back on his promise to her. On the other hand, Ryuen didn't shy away from the intense bullying, despite Karuzawa vehemently claiming to not know the identity. Before the episode ends, Ryuen then makes an unsettling statement that shows his nature as a detestable character: "For the sake of my pleasure, I will destroy Karuzawa Kei." This foreboding statement spells doom for Karuzawa, as the extent Ryuen is willing to go to extract information from her is still unclear. One bugging question remains after the end of episode 11: "Will Ayanokoji reveal his identity to Ryuen?" Certainly, his presence will save Karuzawa from further harassment. But, on the contrary, his absence might make this fatal for the character. Either way, episode 12 is something every Classroom of the Elite fan should anticipate since it will connect the show's loose ends. MORE: Best Anime to Watch If You Love Classroom of the Elite
