Taste innovative stylings at splurge-worthy Castagna, or go for an at-home feel at scenic Salby's on the Columbia River. Taco trucks parked around the city allow you to try every different style imaginable: al pastor (Pablito's Tacos), seafood (Mariscos Jalisco), veggie (Guerrilla Tacos), carne asada (Sonoratown) ... just go ahead and order one of everything. Smoothies: Celebrity culture means an obsession with healthy eating, dieting, and "wellness" foods. Say hi on Instagram @kivoigt. NavinTari/ShutterstockMiami makes the most of its sunshine, with a food scene dominated by Caribbean and Latin American influences. It's Austin's version of comfort food, so you'll find delicious versions of enchiladas, tamales, and burritos at places like Cielito Lindo, Joe's Bakery, and historic Tamale House East. Burgers: California's Route 66 started America's fast food craze back in the 1950s, and Los Angeles offers some of the best. You'll be able to find smoothie bowls, green juice, collagen, turmeric shots ... whichever wellness trend of the day is en vogue, you'll find it in Beverly Hills and beyond. Editor's note: Save these ideas for when it's safe to travel again, and always follow all COVID-19 restrictions, quarantine/testing rules and safety regulations both at your destination and upon returning home. Michael Gordon/ShutterstockKnown for its global cuisine, Portland is one of the best food cities in America. All items are in stock and prices are accurate at the time of publication. Tacos: Say yes to tacos! If you think you know a taco, think again. All You Can Eat: Vegas is a city of excess, and food is no exception. Here it comes by the slice and should be so thin you can fold it in half to eat it. If you buy something through our links, we may earn a commission. Twenty20Sweet home Chicago. If you love to eat as much as you love to travel, these are the best food cities in the U.S. to visit. Lobster Roll: New England's most famous export is the lobster roll, a slab of delicious lobster meat held together by a little bit of mayonnaise on a toasted bun. Brunch: Since time doesn't exist in Vegas casinos, it's always brunch time. XiXinXing/ShutterstockThey say if you can make it in New York City, you can make it anywhere, and that's true of the restaurant scene more than anything else. They're huge, to start. Expect seafood, seafood, and more seafood. With 84 breweries in the greater Portland area, you have plenty to choose from. Try one of the famous Old's Havana Cuban Bar and Cocina in Little Havana. Pizza: There's a great debate in the United States about whether Chicago (see below) or New York has the best pizza. Try ceviche, king crab, or classic fried fish sandwiches at waterfront places like Garcia's Seafood Grill and Fish Market. Key Lime Pie: Florida is home to some of the country's best citrus groves, and Key limes have an extra special punch. Sourdough: San Franciscans invented sourdough bread in the late 1800s, so we have them to thank for this deliciously fermented treat. But you can find fantastic joints all over the city—and don't forget your beans, slaw, and potato salad on the side. Every casino sports a celebrity-chef restaurant, you can sample the best restaurants from New York City, Paris, Tokyo, and more all in one place. Bring your appetite to the famous Giordano's or Lou Malnati's, or try the original Pizzeria Uno, now a national chain. • The 7 Best Things To Do In New York City • 12 Glass-Walled Cabins You Can Rent in the U.S. • The 9 Snowiest Places in the U.S. • The Best Coffee Machines and Delivery Services • America's 12 Most Extravagant Castles and Villas We hand-pick everything we recommend and select items through testing and reviews. You can usually find her at the summit of a mountain or digging into a big bowl of pasta. Poutine: Maine takes a cue from Canada with poutine, which is basically loaded French fries covered in gravy and cheese curds. From innovative mom-and-pop shops to Michelin-starred cuisine, you'll find it all. Gumbo: A literal melting pot of cuisines, gumbo throws together the best of New Orleans' history. You can still feel French influences everywhere, from Creole cooking to architecture. Steak: Go high-end with Kobe beef, prime rib, and more. BBQ: You'll need to wait in line, but it will be worth it at Franklin Barbecue, the king of kings when it comes to smoked meat. DarZel/ShutterstockIt was the French who founded New Orleans in the 1700s, making it one of the oldest and most unique cities in the United States. Most seafood shacks worth their salt offer a fresh-caught version, but we love Eventide Oyster Co., Luke's Lobster, and Bob's Clam Hut. It's the official pie of the state of Florida, and it's worth having for dessert once or twice or 10 times. Try the cult-favorite chains of In-N-Out Burger or Tommy's, or visit homegrown burger joints like Bill's Hamburgers or Hawkins House of Burgers. Try an edible sugar balloon at three-Michelin-star Alinea or dine at two-star Oriole in the West Loop. Every gumbo is a little bit different, so try Gabrielle Restaurant's upscale quail version or the award-winning Chef Ron's Gumbo Stop for a classic seafood-based stew. Even if you don't like to gamble, you'll find plenty of entertainment and excitement for your taste buds in Sin City. Always in search of adventure, Kayla Voigt hails from Hopkinton, Massachusetts, the start of the Boston Marathon. That's just the start of L.A.'s incredible cuisine. Voodoo Doughnut started it all, but it's also worth stopping at Blue Star Donuts and Coco. Try some at Duckfat—it's worth the wait. Whether you're looking for comforting Southern-style food or to experience a slice of Cote d'Ivoire, you'll probably find it in Portland's mix of sit-down restaurants, food carts, and farmers markets. Pizza: There's only one style of pizza in Chicago and that's deep-dish. New York City is one of the only places in the country where you can try literally every single type of cuisine in the world, from Nepalese momos to Venezuelan empanadas and everything in between. Bagels and Lox: Bagels are an essential part of breakfast in the Big Apple. Hot Dogs: Chicagoans love to top their dogs with yellow mustard, relish, sport peppers, tomatoes, and white onions—but never ketchup! Grab bites at Portillo's or Superdawg. There are few things more American than eating as much as you possibly can in one sitting, so bring your elastic waistband to the buffet at the Bellagio, the Wynn, or the Mirage. Grab one at Joe's on Carmine or wait in line at Roberta's in Brooklyn. It's basically a cross between a tomato pie and a lasagna, and that's a really good thing. Twenty20 Did someone say tacos? Try the homemade version at comfort food spot Blue Collar or stop in at the W South Beach after sunbathing. Whoopie Pie: Pennsylvania and Maine argue about who invented this dessert, which involves two chocolate cakes held together with marshmallow frosting. It's a city known for one of the most comforting anti-winter dishes out there: the deep-dish pizza. The cuisine brings together the best of sweet and savory with seafood-heavy stews and soups. It's the place to go if you love spicy seafood, miles of white sand beaches, and tons of live music. Cuban Sandwich: Slap together ham, cheese, roast pork, pickles, and a little bit of mustard on some crispy, baguette-like Cuban bread and you've made magic. From sea to shining sea, there's plenty of incredible food to eat—and not just burgers and fries, either. Leigh Loftus/ShutterstockSomewhere in the mid-2000s, Vegas turned into a culinary destination. Andie Diemer/ShutterstockThe East Coast Portland may be small—population 66,000—but its food scene is mighty. Craft Beer: What makes Portland a must-visit destination is its craft beer scene. Black and White Cookies - A New York specialty, these deliciously fluffy cookies are covered in black and white icing. Beer lovers should visit Cascade Brewing Barrel House, Great Notion Brewing, and Gigantic Brewing, to start. L.A. and New York have a rivalry when it comes to food, and as in New York, you'll find an interesting mix of cuisines from around the world in Los Angeles, with prevalent Mexican, Japanese, and Korean influences. You can go celebrity-spotting at ritzy bistros or grab a few late-night tacos to go—in the City of Angels, anything goes. The city is best known for crab, but oysters, wild salmon, and rockfish are worth trying, too. Go to family-owned Radosta's or cult-favorite Domilise's for your fix. Wine: You're not far from some of America's best wine production in Napa and Sonoma Valley. That began in Berkeley with Alice Waters' iconic restaurant Chez Panisse. Pop into Boudin at the Wharf—one of the very first sourdough bakeries in the country—or go straight to the bread mecca, Tartine. Burritos: Mission-style burritos claim a category all their own for Mexican-American food. We offer our unbiased opinions and do not accept compensation to review products. In the Mission District, check out Taqueria La Cumbre or El Faro, who both claim they invented this dish. Steakhouses are all over the Strip, but you'll find an old-school setting at Golden Steer or a global-inspired meal at Chef Jose Andres' Bazaar Meat. Seafood: You're right on the ocean, so it doesn't get fresher than Miami's seafood scene. Regardless of who created it in the first place, you'll want to try one at Tandem Coffee and Bakery or Two Fat Cats. Here you'll find some of the best New England fare at restaurants that could easily find a spot in trendy neighborhoods of New York City. Steak: Have we mentioned that Texans like their meat? Inspired By Maps/ShutterstockSome of the most American food out there is barbecue, and Austin has some of the best of the best. The United States is one of the most diverse countries in the world in climate, landscape, and cuisine. Donuts: Every city has its sweet tooth, and Portlanders love their bric-a-brac donuts topped with all manner of fanciful creations. Check out Ess-a-Bagel, Russ & Daughters, or H&H for a traditional (and well-known) version, or simply head around the corner from your hotel—great neighborhood bagel joints are everywhere. Beignets: Pillow, delicious confections covered in sugar and fried, beignets alone are worth the trip to the Big Easy. Zebar's offers the best-known version, but most NYC bakeries carry them. Kate Sootornchareon/ShutterstockWhen you hear "California cuisine," you're thinking of lush farm-to-table spreads, vegetarianism, and homemade bread. Some products are sent to us free of charge with no incentive to offer a favorable review. But it's also a city known for innovation and avant-garde art and architecture, so it's no surprise it has some of the most interesting gastronomy the country has to offer. Po-boys: First invented in the 1920s, these "poor boy" sandwiches are loaded with fried fish, roast beef, and fixin's on a loaf of French bread. Dungeness Crab: Try the best the Pacific Ocean has to offer in Portland. Avant-Garde: If you're ready to splurge, Chicago offers top-tier cuisine. Mexican Food: They call it Tex-Mex for a reason. You'll find good eats all over San Francisco, but be warned—it's one of the most expensive places to live in the country, so you'll need to pay up. Texas-style barbecue usually means beef brisket, smoked over a low, wood-fired heat for hours. Plus, it's super vegetarian-friendly. Cure your hangover at Thomas Keller's Bouchon Bistro or Yardbird at the Venetian. Drop by a tasting room on a day trip or hit one of the city's excellent wine bars. Cafe du Monde is the best-known spot, but you'll find them all over the French Quarter.
