Bozarth, M.A. (1983). Opiate reward mechanisms mapped by intracranial self-administration. In J.E. Smith and J.D. Lane (eds.), Neurobiology of Opiate Reward Processes (pp. 331-339). Amsterdam: Elsevier/North Holland Biomedical Press. [This is an example of an article published in a book.]

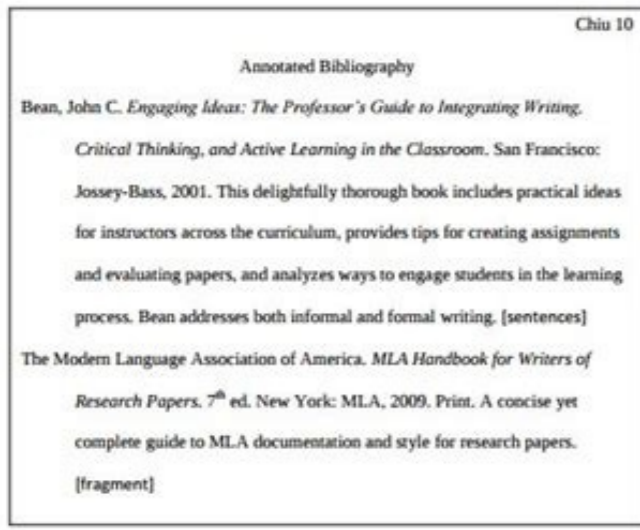

This book chapter reviews data suggesting that the ventral tegmental area is critically involved in opiate reward. In addition it presents the first of several theoretical reviews by the author suggesting that opiate and psychomotor stimulant reinforcement involves activation of the same dopaminergic substrate. (By the mid-1980s the notion that different addictive drugs might share a common reward substrate would become paradigmatic for the study of drug reinforcement and addiction.) Control procedures and other methodological issues for conducting intracranial self-administration studies are also discussed.

Bozarth, M.A. (1987). (ed.) Methods of Assessing the Reinforcing Properties of Abused Drugs. New York: Springer-Verlag. [This is an example of a book citation.]

This book provides the definitive compendium of the experimental methods used to study drug reinforcement. Thirty chapters written by leading experts in each technique provides synopses of the experimental procedures. Both preclinical and clinical methods are presented, grouped by general approach (e.g., preclinical reinforcement studies, preclinical conditioning methods, clinical subjective-effects measures, clinical self-administration procedures). Most chapters present an overview and review of an experimental method, while some chapters provide original experimental data illustrating specific applications of a technique.

Creating an Annotated Bibliography (MLA Format Can Be Adapted to Other Formats)

1. To create an annotated bibliography, set up your format in the same way as for a works-cited list (MLA format), references list (APA format), literature-cited list (CSE format), or bibliography (CMS, Chicago format).
2. Title the list Annotated Bibliography (no italics, underlining, quotation marks, or bold print unless required in the documentation style you are using).
3. Cite all of your sources in alphabetical order according to the documentation style for your paper.
4. Directly after each source, depending on the format, type one or two sentences or fragments that be consistent throughout the paper) of summary and/or evaluation of the source. Some instructors require other specifications such as more content in the annotations or complete sentences only. See the examples in MLA style below: the first illustrates an annotation in sentences; the second, in a fragment. Do not write the words summary or fragment after your entries; these words are for illustration purposes only.

Kilimanji G, Singh H, Yoshida Q, et al. Mechanics on higher incidence involving ischemic mitral regurgitation among patients with myocardial infarction. Cardio Studies. 2005; 127(3):137-45.

Patients who are suffering from Myocardial Infarcts go through greater surge of mitral regurgitation compared to patients who deal with anterior MI. To study this, the researchers focused on measuring LV dilation using echocardiograph among patients who have suffered both.

Keiser Y. Quantitative analysis on mitral valve geometry in patients with previous myocardial infarction. 2007; 124(2):133-146.

The researchers concluded in this study that the higher incidents of myocardial infarction among patients is related to leaflet tethering, and not necessarily with remodeling.

Arienz H, Chen, J. Restoration of nonpharmacologic therapy among college athletes. Int Sport Metab. 2014;24(4):100-108.

This study focused on providing athletes with an effective way on how to restore menses without the use of strong medicines in order to get a customized recommendation of increased intake of energy.

Bell, C., " Holder, M. (2019, January/February). Intergovernmental Relationship between Race, Social Standards and Dietary Behaviors among Women attending the University. American Journal of Health Behavior, 43 (1), 23-36. This article examines a study carried out to compare the racial identity and dietary habits of women on university campuses. The results of the study revealed that women with perceived differences and social/family norms were more likely to develop unhealthy eating habits at the university, more specifically related to the consumption of fruits and vegetables. This resource is useful because it examines race self-perception and how it can impact behavior in ways that influence a person's health in the future. See a full example in APA style: An annotated bibliography is a unique form of bibliography that provides a brief summary or analysis of sources. Although creating an annotated bibliography should not be stressful, many students might find the difficult process. Keep it simple using this shortcut bibliography guide to get perfect annotations in any style. What is an annotated bibliography? So, the big question in everyone's mind is, what is an annotated bibliography? An annotated bibliography is a list of quotations followed by a brief summary or analysis of its sources, also known as annotations. Annotation gives information about the relevance and quality of the sources you cited through a description or interpretation of 150-250 words from the source. Why write annotations? One of the main questions students have is what is the purpose of an annotation. Surprise, it's not just for your teacher. Annotations also help you. Many times, you create your list of references as you begin to investigate your topic. Since you summarize the source an annotated bibliography, you begin to delve into the topic more critically to collect the information for your annotations. This helps you better understand the topic and the sources to help you create your thesis. How to write an annotated bibliography/The creation of an annotated bibliography is a three-step process. It starts with the assessment of sources to find those who will really make their role shine. You'll then start writing your annotation for each different source. The last step is to choose the dating style. Now that the three-step process is known, check let's of each stage of shift. Step 1: Font Analysis When it comes to an annotated bibliography, you have to critically consider the sources and research of your topic. Therefore, it is necessary to look at the qualifications and credentials of the author's, along with the date of the study itself. Since new thoughts and literary movements are happening all the time, you want to make sure that the analysis and opinions you use are relevant to your topic and current times. In addition to the author, make sure that the editor or magazine where you found the investigation is distinguished and reviewed by professionals in the field. The investigation carried out by an unknown or un reputable journal will not make a good source for its arguments or analysis. Other areas you'll want to take into account include: hearing errors aimed at omissions of facts Bias opinions presented as truths critical analysis of all these different areas helps to evaluate whether a source is credible, useful for your project or research, and works to respond to your thesis. Step 2: Create annotations Now that you've used the fundamental academic eye to deep dive into their sources, it's time to create annotations for them. Annotations herà t size unique. Therefore, there are different ways to create them, depending on their intention. You may choose to use descriptive, summary or evaluation in your annotations or a combination of the three. Just remember that you should always include what you ask your instructor. Indicative / descriptive annotations descriptive or indicative They just do what they say. They describe the source. indicative annotations give you a brief summary of the source and the argument and the main points and even chapters within the source. See how this indicative example of annotation works in MLA. Indicative annotation Bibliography Example Zachs, Mitch. The small book of the benefits of the stock market. John Wiley & Sons, 2011. This book covers a wide variety of strategies used in the stock market over the years to improve performance. The most respectful chapters of the text include "Supporting Markets", "Using benefits to achieve its most demanding goals," and "The Challenge of Investing." Briefings and summary statements The summary annotations simply provide a summary of their different sources. Within them, you describe the main arguments or points along with the various topics discussed. This is where it shows why this source was essential and made it to your list. See an example of the informative notes at stake. Briefing Bibliography Example Doerr, John. Measuring what matters: How Google, Bonus and the Gates Rock the World Foundation with OKRs. Penguin, 2018. This book is written by Doerr, who is the chair of a venture capitalist group. The book describes how a business organization can use OKRs to boost a company's focus through agility, leading to explosive growth. These are first-person case studies, after scene narrated by leaders like Bill Gates. This book helps guide the understanding of corporate management strategies that drive the success of large companies. Evaluation annotations Your annotations could stop summarizing, or you could step further by evaluating the source. To do this, you want to compare it and contrast it. Why did this cut? Explain the overall objective of the source and why it fits into your role so well. In addition, you would like to see the reliability of the information and any bias you may have. Dive into your source as This example. Evaluation Annotation Bibliography Example Wilson, John Philip. When the blue jeans come: the lost records of the civil war in UNM Press, 2001. Through primary resources such as original letters, lyrics and lists of low, the author, a historian-archaeologist, provides a fresh narrative of the civil war. The author dissects primary sources as witness testimonies and original periodic stories to clearly understand the battles freed during the civil war. It does not only lead you through the big battles but also of the minors who occur in the west to give you a clear image of the war. While it is interesting to see the war with fresh eyes, it lacks in some areas due to its general vision of the war in its entirety. Combination annotations The annotations do not have to follow a specific format. You can combine the three types of annotations in your annotated bibliography. For example, you could spend a few lines describing and summarizing the work and ending with an evaluation. Writing style for annotations Just like there are different types of annotations that you can create, you can also use different writing styles. The annotations often follow three specific formats depending on their length. Phrases -short phrases that provide information in a fast and concise manner. Phrases -write complete sentences with appropriate score and grammar. Make sure you keep short and concise sentences. Paragraphs À è à The most larger annotations also divide the information in different plusing. This can be very effective for combined annotations. Step 3: Format of bibliography noted All annotated bibliographies have a title, annotation and appointment. While the annotation is the same for everyone, the way you create your title and quote varies according to your style. The three main bibliographic styles used include MLA, APA and Chicago. Examples of annotated bibliography annotated in each different style. Find a rapid description of when using APA, MLA and Chicago styles. Example APA An annotated bibliography APA is used for scientific and technical articles. It is a citation APA and APA format for headers and title. MLA Example An annotated bibliography MLA style is the high school students and college for items of lingÀ %Àstics arts and humanities. This style uses quotes MLA style and formatting as the header names and page number. Chicago example annotated bibliographies Chicago style are a type of style with author-date citations and notes-bibliography. The quote used in the Chicago style may vary by style, but the annotation remains the same. You know that one is a brief synopsis annotation of your Explore how it differs from a summary and a review of literature. What is a literature review? As a one The literature, reviews of literature can be complete documents, in its own right, or can be incorporated into a school document. Its purpose is to review and tie the previously published research to reinforce a writer's own thesis. The review of literature also suggests ways to advance or identifies the gaps in the existing literature. Preparation of a review of the literature helps students learn how to find and evaluate the sources critically. Propicy a summary The difference between a summary and an annotated bibliography is that resumes are included as part of the research documents. Its purpose is to inform an interested investigator on the subject, problem, methodology, findings and conclusion of research. This summary helps students understand if this source is good for their own school document. A summary is written as a summary instead of serving an evaluative purpose. No added material, such as explanations or additional reading, is included in resumes, generally, a summary extends between 150 to 250 words. If you are using an APA style to format your research paper, you may need to include a summary on the page after the title page.
