Steps on How to Enable WhatsApp Notifications on iPhone? Now, let's quickly look into the methods that you need to follow in order to enable WhatsApp notifications on iPhone or iPad with the proper steps: Open the System Settings of your iOS device including iPhones, iPad, etc., from the home screen and go to the Notification bar by scrolling down a little bit. On this page, you will find a series of in-built as well as installed applications present on your device from which you will have to scroll down and choose WhatsApp. Once you open WhatsApp, you will see a page asking for various notification setting configurations. Turn on the button against Allow Notifications first, then turn on sounds and badges and check the notification display styles for your lock screen, notification center, and banners. Once the above steps are done, click on the WhatsApp Notification Settings key placed on the button of your screen to configure your WhatsApp dedicated notification settings. On clicking WhatsApp Notification Settings, you will see a page opening with all sorts of notification config buttons. Make sure to turn on the button next to the Show Notifications and Reaction Notification options for messages as well as group notifications. If you are confused and want to clear everything and start everything together from scratch, click on Reset Notification Settings. For this, go to the system settings of your Android mobile and choose Sound & Vibration. This will open a page that shows the media volumes and your present notification tone. Configure them correctly according to your choice. After this, press the back button on your screen to revert back to the settings menu and click on the Notifications & Control Centre option below the Sounds & Vibration. This will open a page that shows a preview of the notifications displayed on your lock screen, floating notifications, and badges. Click on App Notifications below that. This will open a list of all your applications from which you need to search WhatsApp and check whether the button next to it is turned on or not. After turning the notification button on for WhatsApp, click on it and this will open the app notification settings; make sure all the notification badges are turned on under Show notifications. Click on Show Notification in the chats section and click on Group notifications below that. In the Group notifications, make sure all the badges are turned on. Next, go back to the previous menu by tapping the back button of your home screen once and choose Message Notifications in the chat section. Make sure all the badges in this section are turned on too. Finally, go to your WhatsApp application and click on the three-dot button in the top right corner. This will open the WhatsApp Settings, from which you need to choose Notifications. Lastly, check whether Conversation Tones are on or not and the notification tone is showing the one you had set earlier under system sounds & vibrations. How to Enable WhatsApp Notifications on Lock Screen? To enable WhatsApp notifications on your Android device lock screen, you will first need to go to the System settings and select manage apps from the apps menu. Next, choose WhatsApp from the list of apps that show and click on Notifications. This will open a page where you will have to click Show All Notification Content against the option named On the lock screen. For newer Android models click on Allow Lock screen notification directly under the WhatsApp Notification settings page. Whereas, if you want to enable WhatsApp Notifications on your iPhone lock screen, the first tap on the Settings followed by the button Notifications. This will open a series of applications from which you will have to scroll down till you find WhatsApp and tap on it. It will open the Notification Settings Page of WhatsApp, from where you will have you enable the lock screen button in the alerts section under the Allow Notifications bar. Simple Process of How to Enable WhatsApp Notifications on the Desktop? People have also complained about a common issue of their WhatsApp notifications coming on their mobile device but not on the pc or laptop it is linked in. To solve this issue follow these steps carefully: Open your WhatsApp web or the BlueStacks WhatsApp app from your desktop. Next, you will need to click on the three dots option on the top left corner of the screen and choose Settings from the drop-down list that opens. Next, you will have to choose Notifications from the left page to view the WhatsApp Notifications. Put a check on the boxes saying Sounds, Desktop alerts, and Show Previews depending upon your wish, and make sure the box against the Turn off all desktop notifications option is disabled. To enable Google Chrome to show WhatsApp Web notifications, go to Chrome settings, and click on Site settings under the Privacy and Security menu. Next, go to the Notifications page and type web.whatsapp.com in the search bar and select Allow. Do Check: Disable 'WhatsApp Web is Currently Active' Notification For Mozilla Firefox users, go to the Preferences option from the top right corner, select Privacy & Security and choose Permissions from the right-hand screen. Till then have a good day and take care of yourselves. The lock screen of your Android phone can be very useful, showing notifications and letting you access certain features without having to unlock your phone first. (Something that may be even more useful if you've got a Pixel 6 or 6 Pro and are still having problems with the fingerprint sensor.) Here are some ways you can tweak the settings for your lock screen. These were tested using a Pixel 6 running Android 12; as always, different Android phones can have somewhat different procedures. Enable lock screen notifications First, you can choose whether you want to show both alerts and silent notifications, show alerts only, or not show any notifications at all. Go to your phone's settings (usually, by swiping down from the top and tapping on the gear symbol) and select Notifications Scroll down to and tap Notifications on lock screen Here, you can choose from three different selections: show conversations (both default and silent); hide silent conversations and notifications (silent notifications are those that come up without a sound or vibration, such as the weather or a headline); or don't show any notifications at all. (Again, your mileage on what exactly is shown may vary, depending on your phone's manufacturer and the version of Android you're using.) Select Notifications on lock screen to enable that feature. You have three choices for how (or if) to show notifications on the lock screen. You can also choose to show or not show sensitive information on your lock screen by toggling "Sensitive notifications" on or off. If it's toggled off, you will only see the app that the notification is from rather than the notification itself—for example, you'll see "1 new message" rather than any information about the message. Choose which apps appear on your lock screen The apps that appear on your lock screen are the same apps that are permitted to send you notifications. You can choose which those are. Go to your phone's settings Select Notifications > App settings You'll see a list of your apps; you can sort them in alphabetical order, in the order of the most recent or most frequent; you can also list which apps were turned off. Use the toggle to the right of each app name to turn its notifications on or off completely. If you tap on the name of the app, you can manage more specific types of notifications for that app. You can sort the apps that send notifications in various ways. You can fine-tune the notifications for each app. Get personal information on your lock screen While you can choose just to get general notifications on your lock screen, such as news headlines or the weather, you can also get more personal notifications for emails, reminders, flight reservations, and other items. With your phone on, tell your Google Assistant to open Assistant settings. You can also find them by going to Settings > Apps > Assistant > See all Assistant Settings > Personal results. In the Your phone tab, make sure Personal results (which lets Assistant access your email, calendar, etc.) is toggled on. You can then toggle on Personal suggestions on lock screen before you ask. In your Assistant settings, select See all Assistant Settings Then select Personal results Now you can enable personal suggestions on your lock screen Use Google Assistant on the lock screen Google Assistant can answer questions and follow direction from the lock screen if set to do so. It can also be a little annoying if you accidentally trigger it so that it starts unexpectedly talking. Here's how you can either activate Google Assistant to work from the lock screen or turn it off. Go back to Settings > Apps > Assistant > See all Assistant Settings but this time select Lock screen Toggle on Assistant responses on lock screen. Now when you say "Hey Google," your phone will answer. If you want to activate Google Assistant from the lock screen without saying anything (for example, by just tapping the screen), toggle on the second section on that page. This time, select Lock screen from the Assistant settings page You can enable Assistant responses on lock screen; below it, you can get results when just tapping on the screen According to Google, there are some verbal responses that will not be given from the lock screen, even if you allow it to display personal results. These include payments, Google Photos, requests to open other apps, or questions about your name or address, among others.
